IN THE MEMORY OF Program Notes by the Composer, Edward David Zelfiff: This work was originally written as an a cappella choral piece in response to my father's death. I was not there when it happened, and so found resonance in a poem by the 19th century American author Emily Dickinson in which she expressed the need to know just how the lost loved one felt and what he or she experienced at the moment of dying since the death took place so far away from home. The piece itself was characterized by strong melodic and harmonic content, especially in the use of a sort of "rondo" formal structure that varied the presentation of the "refrain" motive each time it returned. Being a bit of a restless composer, I kept hearing more potential in the music, and I had been thinking for some time about writing yet another piece to honor my father, one that would recognize the fact that we remember an entire life when we remember a loved one who has passed away. And thus the genesis of this instrumental use of the melodic and harmonic ideas from the original choral piece, only now the music is "sung" by a solo cello that is supported and set off by the intimacy of a chamber orchestra. The new title invokes the remembering of moments and incidents and personality and the whole span of a person's life, and the music should take us all to those moments, those incidents, and all that those persons meant to us, as we spend time in the memory of someone loved and lost, but not forgotten.

A BIG CAT HUG Program Notes by the Composer, Stephanie Bennett (as heard on her CD, "Stories Seldom Told"): I wrote this one afternoon while watching my beloved cat sleeping. In a style that moves from a gentle folk-music feel to a flowing Impressionism and back again, this piece expresses the wonder and pleasure of sharing one's life with a beautiful little creature. The word "pet" does not convey nearly enough respect to one who repays one's care and devotion tenfold, in life-affirming warmth and affection.

With our Appreciation to those who helped to make this concert possible.
